Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, May 4, 2013 – 10:00 a.m.

Life is not a bed of roses. But each test allows a person to grow, to react as best as possible and transform oneself inwardly, recognising that all tests are necessary for one's transformation and elevation when properly understood and accepted in this way.

It is not easy to integrate this principle and the subtleties that engage it beyond this Earthly life. The wise person succeeds in this to a certain extent, thereby expanding this space where his or her future is shaped.

Our spiritual way provides for this work, for the journey of the being towards attaining his or her best condition. This action is unceasing; it is necessary that one be truly committed to it, but it is worth it. The time will come when all these comments will be understood and will generate the necessary efforts.

Rising spiritually is the true purpose of an incarnation, and being aware of this is the beginning of a real transformation. Many human beings are still rejecting such principles; it will take time for all of humanity to focus on the goal to be reached in order to overcome the miasma of materiality. The goal is noble; one day, all will succeed. We are acting with all the strength we can, being helped in this by the divine power. It is up to each and every one to motivate themselves and act accordingly. Everything has a price, but all can achieve the goal, supported in this by our ceaseless action.

Blessings.
