Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, July 17, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

This despondency is not like you, my dear daughter. You have endured so much in your life.

Now that you have reached this true connection with us, which fills you with joy, don't let yourself be overwhelmed by all these difficulties on the physical and material planes.

Do not fear tomorrow, as you do; a kind soul will surely come to you if you have no one to help you out and prepare food for you.

The Medium: Dependence is painful, Babuji, having no one to truly count on is painful in my situation.

It will not always be so for you. We will surely find a solution so that you are supported for all material issues and free from day-to-day practical problems.

It will not be said that we leave our daughter, indefinitely, facing her difficulties alone.

Brotherhood still exists; a kind soul will surely come forward and help you, even though you had given up hope for it.

Be courageous, as you have always been; many in your place would have given up long ago.

You are doing very well in other areas. You know well that these messages are something important to us. They will be read more than you think. Very fortunately, there are open-minded people; they may not agree with everything, but they will derive benefits that will ultimately open their eyes. They will then understand the truth about these contacts that we have been having for so long. The development of this story, the progression in our way of communicating, all this will appear to them in all its reality: a beautiful, undying love story between Master and disciple.
