Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, August 11, 2013 – 10:00 a.m.

This heavenly manna will nourish hearts more and more; this is in the order of things. By and large, humanity is advancing. Although it may not be apparent now, the future will be different in many respects. Here, with these writings, an edifice is being erected that will withstand the test of time and the changes that lie ahead. Is it not said: 'what must be will be.'

In the distant future, obscurantism will be overcome. Highly evolved beings will help humans to progress in every respect. Life as a whole will be respected and real progress will be established on Earth. The potential of this Earth is immense, yet some values must still be reviewed and complied with; currently, they are not, and this could destabilise life as a whole. May humans come to their senses and once and for all respect what this planet represents with its immense richness in many domains. Nothing is moving in this direction, and the elements will have to be unleashed more and more for humans to come to their senses and no longer exceed the limits.

Great upheavals are to come, as we have said time and again. Everything moves slowly here below, but these substantial changes will inevitably come about for the realisation of a better world, one that is both desired and necessary. It is up to the grace of the higher powers; all will happen in its time for the best to be established. May all our aspirants consider this need for change and move towards personal elevation. Such is our hope and the justification for our action. To all the best.
