Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, August 17, 2013 — 10:00 a.m.

Be at peace; what must be will be. Everything changes in this world, and yet the divine laws are immutable and the destiny of each individual is inescapable. It takes time for humans to understand where the true path lies — away from violence, greed and all human baseness. Seeing only the beautiful, longing for the best — for oneself and for all aspirants — yields positive results. May it one day spread over all the Earth, bringing humanity back to reason and away from recurrent acts of violence, of war between countries and between people of the same race and ethnicity. How can it still be like this? Following a spiritual way like ours should change everyone's behaviour. Is this happening? What should be eradicated from the being is gradually removed through the constant cleaning that is being done. There is still so much to do; we can see certain egos are manifesting themselves in an unacceptable way among some of our aspirants.

"These times are difficult; may the best emerge for our Mission so that its glorious future is secured. It is said that perfection is not of this world, but the attempt to attain it is already promising. May all our abhyasis take stock of themselves, of their tendencies, and more importantly, of their yearning to attain the highest level of consciousness. It is necessary to come to terms with material aspects, and these should not impede one's progress towards a goal that is unique and worthy of attainment. That is what we firmly hope for all."
