My Beloved Master
Revered Babuji Maharaj

Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, August 22, 2013 — 10:00 a.m.

Time is passing, leaving its mark in this world. Although everything is ephemeral, some great spiritual movements defy time and they establish themselves for the good of humanity. People have a need for certainty, for reference points that material life with its many turbulences cannot really provide. When the mind opens up to this higher reality, sensitive beings need a path that is suitable for them. That moment in life is important. The needs of the soul must be met, and to be aware of this testifies to a degree of wisdom which few people have. It takes time, trials and passages of every sort to understand and to feel within oneself this profound call and the thirst it generates for the Divine.

"From life to life, one is being structured and one asserts oneself, aspiring to follow a guide who is a Master in this matter. Following a steep mountain path is not always easy. This thirst for the Divine motivates and allows one to advance while circumventing, if necessary, the manifestations of the ego. These can be devastating in extreme cases, the traces of which are still carried by humanity. Nothing is simple or easy; in all things, it is effort alone that brings one to the goal. Here, it is about the noblest goal, the most rewarding in terms of the elevation of the soul; such elevation remains the only true possession of humans. Human beings do not carry their worldly goods with them, but this asset defies time. Blessings to all."

Babuji Maharaj