Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, August 24, 2013 – 10:00 a.m.

Everything passes, everything wears out," it is said. A loving heart, on the other hand, never tires. Over time, it deepens in its ability to love, to capture the elusive and to always forge ahead in the discovery of peace – a peace that is inaccessible to the many humans who are detached from real values. Where do such values lie for most of these people? Only on the material plane. It is truly sad to see this, but nothing can be forced; everyone is to do what is planned for them and nothing more. Except for a few very special cases, that is how it goes. Blessed are those who are advancing on a path that is rewarding at this level and that opens up the finest prospects for the aspirant. It takes time for beings to be able to take up the right path – in accordance with their own inclinations and their deep longing – and to understand this need for the soul to rise. It is noble and always leads to results. Depending on the circumstances, the place of birth and social environment, a path opens up to the aspirant who is seeking the Divine.

Every incarnation includes life experience and all that goes with it, on all levels. Everything has its raison d'être, justifying all that humans must endure for their elevation. When they realise this, they have made a big step and they advance more serenely, despite the various challenges that present themselves along the way. Faith protects humans from the despair that can arise from painful events. Everything is accounted for; nothing is lost. Faith can save one from many evils. May our faithful abhyasis move forward against all odds. We do not lose sight of them, quite the contrary.

May all be blessed.
