Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, July 19, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

Don't be worried about your son-in-heart, his path is all mapped out, he is under high protection.

He came to Earth with a mission to fulfil and will make his way despite the obstacles that will inevitably stand in his path.

There will be two of them to face up to things, which is a strength in life.

You know something about that, having been supported in very hard moments of your existence. Two soul mates do not find each other again by accident. It is programmed long in advance, with a precise purpose.

Mission or not, each incarnation has its raison d'être, with its difficulties of all kinds.

Life is the best school to help you progress, provided you accept and are grateful to be able to make such a journey.

The wise accept; the less wise are reluctant and they slow down their forward movement. It takes a long time and many twists and turns for a soul to begin to open up to the point of totally exposing its heart to the beneficial rays of love.

Be happy with the destiny that is yours. Give thanks for having been chosen to go through this experience; you are deemed worthy of it.

In despairing moments, never cease thanking God and your Masters; all that happens to you, good or bad, has its raison d'être.

They follow you all and carry you in the most difficult moments, without your realizing it, even though you think you are abandoned.

Be blessed now and forever.
