Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, October 3, 2013 — 09:30 a.m.

This is the moment when everything calms down, when your heart exults in loving, as it does so well. In that moment, worries associated with this world, as well as with the many problems inherent in this material life, are overcome. Spirituality is the true refuge. It brings about serenity and necessary hindsight, when one is fully committed. It is perfectly possible to strike a balance between an active life and this practice; one has only to decide and plan accordingly. Great mystics did it and are still doing it today, in these times that are increasingly troubled and diverted from true values. These values are and will remain a definite anchor, one that is important for humans facing the hazards of an incarnation. Anything is possible. Our way has valuable assets and it can lead aspirants to levels they could not have anticipated. There lies reality and long-term results prove it. We are very happy for all of our brothers and sisters who participate in this divine feast.

"Time brings about significant results, tailored to the laws of evolution in this world. The darkness of the past is far behind us, and yet people still have a long way to go before achieving a degree of opening that is both desirable and required for substantial transformation. That transformation entails much suffering and multiple experiences, as well as the necessary commitment of the heart. Nothing is simple; advancing towards that transformation requires effort, but the result is worth it. To all, our incessant blessings."
