Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, October 12, 2013 – 10:00 a.m.

Life is multidimensional. At the material level it is demanding, as there are inevitably many obligations. Spiritual life offers other opportunities; devoting oneself to it, however little it may be, completely changes one's trajectory. An incarnation always holds surprises. Everything can shift in an instant, altering one's conception of life in its constant movement. Opening up to such a spiritual approach testifies to a need, a personal transformation whose effects will continue to manifest over time. When this stage is reached, the soul calls out; this thirst for the Divine becomes inescapable. The level of evolution of each and every seeker accounts for their approach, their personal quest to go towards what they presently deem important and necessary for their advancement.

When the heart is in need, it looks for the path – one that corresponds to it. It does not always find such a path immediately. Sometimes unsatisfactory experiences can lead one towards making the right choice later on. Finding one's way, that which answers this inner call, is a true blessing. Even if previous experiences have been useful and have prepared the seeker, it is at this time that the journey can start; everything can fall into place and bring about the best. Our way is working accordingly. Many of our brothers and sisters have had these experiences – ones that prepared them in some way to better grasp the importance of their current work within the Sahaj Marg Mission. To all, we wish the best – awakening, knowledge and a full blossoming in this endeavour which is essential to the progress of each one.

Blessings.
