Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, October 17, 2013 — 9:30 a.m.

Life in this incarnation is granted to human beings so that they can grasp the true meaning of their Earthly journey. Does one always succeed? Certainly not, but each step of an incarnation is a lesson in understanding the reason for one's experiences. A person has all kinds of experiences, but does one always understand the true meaning of these trials? It is not easy; some wisdom must be gained in order to be able to make sense of things. Consider the example of a great spiritual Master — his life is not easy either. He is constantly confronted with the turmoil of this world, with its many — and sometimes unpleasant — facets. No one is spared. This planet has its own peculiarities, and others have theirs.

"The Earth is not the only inhabited planet, as many human beings still believe; they would be very surprised to discover the truth. But let us not extrapolate. An incarnation is not so easy to accept; it would be better to comply with the laws prevailing here below and to do one's best. All in good time. One day, our brothers and sisters will continue their journey elsewhere under our guidance, as is proper. Beyond this world, our faithful abhyasis are followed and guided as required for their evolution. All will reach the goal — their commitment is not in vain, as it opens doors for them which they could not otherwise have passed through. May all rest assured that their commitment within our Mission — whatever the level — provides them with a valuable monitoring. All should be convinced of that."
