Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, December 18, 2013 – 10:00 a.m.

What is essential here below is to not lose sight of true values. These differ from one human being to another, according to their education and nature. It is wise to not forget what constitutes the reality of the human being and what it represents in the face of higher powers. Humans are very small in the face of adversity; the willingness and desire to do the right thing are a great help, but everyone must comply with their destiny. Is there a more beautiful prospect than progressing towards the ultimate goal? Every day the Great Work is being built – the work of uniting with the Divine. To add an element, however small, to this unparalleled construction gives meaning to life – the most noble meaning there is and, above all, the most lasting in its effects.

All is vain here below, where in a certain way, everything is forgotten over time. What is conquered here lasts well beyond what abhyasis imagine. This passage on Earth allows one to progress, to consider true values, those that elevate the soul to spaces of unimaginable splendour. Devoting a little time to spiritual practice denotes a certain wisdom, a profound aspiration for the Divine, a call of the soul for what constitutes the only real asset of the human being. We wish all a true awakening to this reality in these troubled times when people go astray and disregard the reason they are incarnate, which is to progress towards the ultimate peace.
