Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, December 20, 2013 – 10:00 a.m.

Where are the real values? It is wise to reconsider life and its underlying objectives. It is sometimes necessary to stop and reflect on what is important and what, ultimately, is not. There are choices and decisions to be made; the essential thing is to move towards what is truly important, beyond material needs. A deep and sincere call of the soul is always to be considered; doesn't the only true purpose of an incarnation lie in the possibility of progressing and understanding what is truly needed to elevate the being to its highest destiny! Life has the final say and most often disrupts, in their broad outlines, the plans that humans make. Every motivated aspirant is led where they are to go. Our brothers and sisters are committed to a greater or lesser extent, but they are doing the practice and they understand its usefulness in terms of what it brings them. Even though it is not always obvious, progress is made, and it is not negligible.

A year ends and the time comes for assessment. Are the results satisfactory? Do they truly meet each person's deep aspirations? May all our brothers and sisters be discerning and do what is best for themselves. Our blessings accompany them every day of their lives; through joys and sorrows, they are human beings, subject to the same laws. Their commitment to a spiritual path is important. May all become fully aware of it.

May they be blessed!
