Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, January 1, 2014 — 10:00 a.m.

Time, as it is measured on Earth, is viewed completely differently here. Each of the created worlds has its own laws, and living beings must comply with them — this is how it is. How can we make Earthlings accept that they are not alone, contrary to what they may think? We will not insist any further, as we would not be understood; the time has not yet come for true knowledge to be revealed and accepted.

"Humans have their reference points, their habits and especially their beliefs that are passed along through the ages, without much advancement in the discovery of truth. Some still believe that humans are not sufficiently mature and evolved for the truth to be revealed to them, and so, by and large, humanity is not granted true knowledge. Such are the preconceptions, the misjudgements that keep humans at the present stage of ignorance. We can only let time do its work; the dramatic changes it will bring about will enable real progress in this area.

"May people's minds open up and see the truth, allowing humanity a subtle approach to life regarding its great possibilities, which are currently out of reach and yet so desirable for the good of all. In this, we must comply with laws and customs of this world without going too far ahead. These messages, and the principle of transmission on which they rely, are not yet understood by all. In this season of good wishes, let us formulate ours: we wish the best to all, within the time and framework allocated to us."
