Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, February 20, 2014 – 10:00 a.m.

Even the longest journeys come to an end. In their diversity, everything they provide is to be considered. Each step is revealing for all who truly want to take the trouble to retain what is appropriate. Time and again, we have revisited the same topics; from beginning to end, human life is built on continual repetitions. Many are necessary, and they help one understand subtleties that are not always easy to grasp in their true sense. When the end of this journey is reached, it can be easier to realise why so many trials are necessary in order for each one to grow and take another step in the right direction.

Following a spiritual path is a support, helping one clarify things, overcome trials and better appreciate joys. When the heart blossoms spiritually, another space opens up to it. It better grasps the importance of going beyond this material world, so as to perceive what emanates from much higher planes of consciousness. Over time, abhyasis become more refined, and they progress without really being aware it. The goal of every approach lies there, and Sahaj Marg provides answers to those who really seek them. A great many hearts are opening up to the higher reality, a space that is undefinable in human terms, but so full of true joys – those that strengthen the soul in its need to love and unite with the Divine in the most beautiful manner. Each step made in this direction is an unparalleled grace. This world of various illusions and disturbances effectively conceals this sublime reality, one that gradually reveals itself to the seeker who is committed and transported by this love. May all succeed in winning it over.

Blessings.
