Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, April 2, 2014 — 10:00 a.m.

Human beings are as they are, and they do their best in the face of life's difficulties. Everyone has their potential. Generally speaking, nothing is simple. There is no such thing as a life without trials — they are formative in many respects. No human being is spared; sooner or later reality manifests itself and produces that which is needed. By trying to understand the laws of life, one is enabled to move forward properly through its many mazes, where problems arise unexpectedly. Nothing is simple — ever. The Great Beings themselves are not immune to the depravity of this world; all are subject to the same laws. Within oneself is the answer to all the evils that are rushing at humankind, and these are not about to stop. Spiritual openness allows humans to put things into perspective and realise their need to learn lessons, to be trained and to advance in the understanding of life's phenomena and subtleties.

"Each incarnation allows for advancement and the recognition that one must suffer and struggle in order to live and learn. It is not easy to accept this reality; advancing in a spiritual way helps put things into perspective and allows one to understand all these overarching principles in human evolution. We have no miracle cure to propose, but rather a way of moving forward, towards that which is actually the most important aspect: the elevation of the soul, a human being's essential characteristic. The soul is immortal; therefore it is deserving of your effort to understand, as best you can, what needs to be done in order to achieve the best results. Reaching the goal is the apotheosis. One day the divine goal is attained, and then another journey begins, one that is heavenly. Blessings to all."
