Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, April 8, 2014 — 10:00 a.m.

Human beings are not easy to understand; they aspire to knowledge, but it is most important that we do not unsettle them by going too far. What to do? Time itself will bring to light what must be made evident. We are preparing this future as best we can, by gradually discussing the key points. The era of darkness will one day be overcome, and the people of Earth will advance appropriately towards a more just humanity — one that is in accord with the major elements determining a pre-planned and inevitable evolution.

"For millennia, upheavals that are unimaginable today have been occurring, and yet the Earth is still turning and humans have always adapted by force of circumstances. Everything changes and evolves gradually. That is how it is on Earth, and it is not going to change any time soon. Neither are human beings changing dramatically, but changes are taking place in them on the molecular level. Today's humans are different from the cavemen, and tomorrow's humans would truly surprise those of today. People must open up to a reality that will one day take hold of them. Ignorance limits humans to their smallness. The laws of life will one day lead them where they need to be, without asking their opinion. So it goes; a day will come when the truth will be revealed on this Earth. Let us move towards that. May all be strengthened and enlightened for the benefit of each one."
