Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, April 16, 2014 – 10:00 a.m.

Everything has been said, apparently, and yet so many truths are still ignored in this world today. That is the way humans are. When will they truly grow up and be able to accept reality? True knowledge will advance humanity. Some limit themselves to their small person, questioning teachings and a realistic view of things. Time will necessarily provide clarification on sensitive points; we are not there yet, so it seems. The divine power is great, and in its own manner it resolves what does not suit it. The human being feels so helpless in the face of this greatness, which leads one to accept one's destiny.

Embarking on a spiritual path that truly works to elevate the soul saves precious time. We can never say it enough, life is so short here below. There is no time to waste – it is so very limited. Even the most well-informed persons are not truly aware of this. It takes many trials for them to realise just how fleeting everything is in this world. Missing an opportunity to progress, to unite with the Divine, is very sad indeed, but nothing in this domain can be transformed solely by the human will. The whole being must be committed. Although the aspirant's life continues in all its manifestations, the heart, the central axis of the being, must be fully open and move towards its own truth.

It is so good to love, to surrender to the Divine, to the Master who represents It; thus the connection is established and the best can happen. This is how it is.
