Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, July 25, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

As long as there will be human beings on Earth, we will have inspirational topics. As concerns us, have no fear. We still have things to say, as long as you will be able to write them down.

We often speak in a vacuum, but it happens that certain formulas strike people's minds, hence the necessary repetition of the words and the subjects treated differently to draw one's attention.

What do these messages amount to? We cannot reveal to you the secrets of the universe. We cannot give you 'scoops' which you, Earthlings, are so fond of. Therefore, it is necessary to confine oneself to what occurs here, inside you and around you.

Your reactions towards others, the big issue is there: the human relation, the frictions it generates and the incomprehension it creates. 'The nest of vipers' lies at this level. Even among 'advanced' beings, conflicts of cohabitation and communication exist. Humans struggle between their gregarious instinct and their frenzied individualism.

If they happen to endure their fellow human beings, they cannot help, from time to time – like cats that give their neighbour a good swat – criticizing them, and even slandering them. We are here in a normal human context, shall we say. We will avoid dwelling on the atrocities committed in the name of freedom, order and other reasons. There, we move from comedy to tragedy. If you had, like us, an overall picture of these horrors, you would not instantly be able to get over it. The horror films, in which some of you delight, are the reflection of reality.

This Earth is a breeding ground where the best and the worst are side by side. Thank God for being on the good side, for the moment.
