Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, May 7, 2014 — 10:00 a.m.

The Sahaj Marg Mission is advancing over time. It is part of a great liberating movement which, in due course, will be ready to contend with things. Although some aspects evolve and allow it to adapt to the coming changes, our way will remain as it is in terms of its divine principle. Future generations will be different, and high technology will open up new horizons for them, allowing for a fruitful communication adapted to the realities of a new world.

"Opposition to change is not good for anyone on the material plane. Modernity has led to a substantial expansion of our way and an unprecedented dissemination of information. This breakthrough has provided a large number of aspirants with a teaching that supports and strengthens that which has been in existence since the inception of this Mission. Why would we remain limited and fossilised in this area? Knowledge strengthens seekers in their quest for the Divine; how could it diminish such a quest? Rather, the future will generously open the doors of knowledge in this domain.

"Interiorising oneself and opening up more and more to the Divine, while being carried by victorious love, also require certain aspects of a knowledge that is constructive for human evolution. Some great mystics of the past are still examples of a level of open-mindedness that was not commonplace in their time, nor is it today. To each according to their potential and their deepest aspirations. May all be fulfilled and carried by grace; such is the purpose of our action."
