Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, July 25, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

You know that it is enough to love us to touch our heart. This faculty is innate in you. That is not within the reach of everyone; they believe they love, they try, but they do not succeed.

They make efforts, they are regular in their abhyas, but their hearts do not expand. They love with their heads, sometimes hopelessly. Fortunately for them, all their efforts count. Those beings, too, are touching. They have to live with this difficulty, which is part of their path in life. We help them, just like all of you, so that your qualities and your faults serve you equally.

Nothing is left to chance; we put to good use all the aspects of your personality.

We regard all of you with much attention, as a clock mechanism, fragile and precious.

You do not have to complain about your Masters while you have no real possibility of evaluating their work.

That does not matter; in the future you will realize what has been done for you.

Once released from your Earthly shackles, you will be able to truly appreciate the extent of what has been achieved for you.

That will create between all of you and us an indestructible bond for the rest of time.
