Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, May 22, 2014 – 10:00 a.m.

Whatever may happen and be said, divine laws impose upon the Earth what must be. Caught in the whirlpool of this world of matter, humans do not always appreciate things at their true worth, and appropriately – hence the need in certain circumstances for surrender, as recommended in our way. Many rebel, embittered in their wish to circumvent these laws, but karma is intractable and imposes its laws on one and all. Doesn't everything have its raison d'être; perspective is often necessary to understand this reality.

Year after year we come back to the same subjects – how could it be otherwise! Wisdom is not innate in humans; it can take quite some time for them to access reality. Following a spiritual way opens horizons and allows a more sensitive approach to the phenomena related to this complexity. From life to life a whole process takes place, escaping human consciousness; everything is accomplished in a timely manner, often far from plans known to humans. By no means can divine laws be circumvented without serious consequences. This has been demonstrated in the past when higher decisions within our Mission were not respected. What must be will be, under the blessings and with the support of the higher powers.
