Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, June 13, 2014 — 10:00 a.m.

We must live in the present, as intensely as possible, and not waste the opportunity granted by a true spiritual path. Life is short compared to eternity; it is only one more breath in this arrangement that is very abstract for humans. They see their lives and the world in general in their own manner, based on pieces of information that are often unreliable. Following a way such as ours yields results that open up more encouraging prospects in this area.

"How many human beings care about their spiritual evolution? Many are doing their best, which is already a good thing. Individual behaviour matters a good deal in this process and is a decisive factor for true success, even in a way like ours. All are supported and appropriately monitored. You cannot choose your destiny, but the way of being can change depending on one's personal growth. Life is always full of surprises, from beginning to end; everything is planned in advance and remains beyond the control of humans. The opposite would not necessarily be a good thing, as so many false judgements and beliefs mislead human beings. We do not mean to act like prophets, but we are doing our best for the good of the Mission and all abhyasis who trust us. They are on their way — one that will lead them as far as is possible, according to their commitment and their aspiration to the Divine. Life is not easy here below. Doing one's best with all one's heart, following one's Master, complying with his decisions — all this is a sign of wisdom and should be remembered by all. One day the divine purpose will be achieved. It is good to progress with this perspective. Blessings to all."
