Beloved Master
Revered Babuji Maharaj

Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, July 27, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

From the most powerful to the weakest, each one has one's own place and role to assume. Everything exists in this world; it is a breeding ground where the various species coexist, support each other, kill each other or, in the best cases, help each other.

Differences are useful at the divine level where each nature can show its talents, develop qualities and exorcize fears and vices by going to the extremes of horror. These beings will then be able one day, here or in another incarnation, to rise towards the light and be divested, with time, of this heavy carapace that hugs them tightly.

Feel sorry, all of you, for these souls who are still in such turbulence.

Pray for light to shine one day for them.

Be happy for having reached this stage where you start climbing the ladder of perfection. Reaching the first step is already an achievement in itself, given the way traversed.

Be compassionate with those who are still in the jaws of evil, who are struggling like poor wretches when they become aware of their situation and do not manage to get out of it.

Try to understand them, whoever they may be; have compassion.

You do not know where you came from; therefore, you should cultivate tolerance at all costs. It is a major quality, it can only serve your own evolution.

Babuji