Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, July 5, 2014 — 10:00 a.m.

The possibilities of this Mission will continue to grow, and its action will spread more and more across the world to meet a growing call. Many changes will occur on the Earth and humans will revert to values that are more just and capable of answering a profound appeal — the longing of the soul to rise. Other dimensions of consciousness are available to the world, which still has to work in that direction and become truly motivated to achieve the required level. Everything is possible, since fervour begets grace and the latter can achieve what seemed impossible. Times will change — surely and fortunately, shall we say. Great cycles of renewal have occurred on this Earth for the good of all and will occur again. It is right to envision a better world; this testifies to an eagerness to grow, to move towards the good, towards that which is best in every respect. It is not harmful to dream in this way; why should evil prevail over good? A balance must be established, allowing humans to lead a life that is more conducive to their evolution. It is here that each one's purpose lies, and not in feats that flatter the ego; the best does not lie there.

"Nothing is simple — neither to live, nor to understand, hence the need for surrender as advocated in a spiritual way like ours. Surrender is the essential thing; rebelling is not constructive, as it confuses humans more than it guides them. Each person's objective, whether one is aware of it or not, is to achieve the ultimate goal — one that leads the aspirant to a promising level of consciousness for the development of the soul. We are constantly working for this, as desired by the higher powers; this is how it goes."
