Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, July 9, 2014 – 10:00 a.m.

Human beings cannot understand everything in life's expressions; in many instances they are left behind. Our abhyasis must progress in surrender and trust towards the Master and the hierarchy that is watching over the smallest aspects in the unfolding of events. We know human beings in their slightest weaknesses, and none of them is perfect. The choice to progress, to move forward in this quest for the Divine, highlights the good aspects of the personality – those upon which we must work. That cannot be done without this form of surrender that raises no barriers with respect to the work being carried out here below. For aspirants, isn't the essential thing that they should grow and exceed their limits – limits that the mind sets much more often than it should!

The important thing is here and now; there the real work must lie, work that bears fruit in the long term, raising the being above human baseness. Everyday life sweeps one up in a whirlwind of vagaries, whose subtleties must sometimes be grasped. Doesn't everything have its raison dêtre! One should not search our comments for effects and intentions that are not there. Here, the intellect should step back, one might say. Only the heart in its highly subtle receptivity must grasp our words, capturing and understanding their true meaning far from the fantasies of the mind. The heart line is straight and simple, yet so effective. Surrender and love are crucial here, where the best can be accomplished under our constant blessings.
