Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, August 27, 2014 – 10:00 a.m.

Perfection is not of this world, nor is it coming about soon. Our abhyasis, like all human beings, have to work on themselves before attaining it. What is being done in our path goes in this direction: to help beings progress and overcome the negative effects that can hinder them in their evolution. An enormous work remains to be done; the important thing is to understand this and to make sure that the best is being carried out. One day, the divine goal will be attained. We are moving in this direction at all levels. What is good for human beings reverberates beyond this world and yields positive results; nothing is in vain when it is necessary for human evolution. We will never repeat often enough how judicious it is to reserve a special place for such an endeavour; it is a very fruitful commitment, and one that our brothers and sisters will not regret. Other than helping them, what would be the purpose of our work? When we ourselves were incarnate, we could assess the effects of the negativity that plagues this world on many levels.

Human consciousness is beginning to awaken to Reality; some people can measure the effects of this awakening and are committed to serving others on this uncommon journey – a journey that can change an existence without one having to necessarily withdraw from life and its negative aspects. Everything can be overcome when faith and love carry the being in this sublime quest for the Divine. We are dreaming of a more just humanity, one that is more productive of good sentiments. It is up to each and every one to invest themselves accordingly, if they so wish. All people of goodwill are supported, and although appearances can be deceiving, our action is there for the benefit of all. One day they will be able to see it; this is how it is.
