Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, December 22, 2014 – 10:00 a.m.

My dear daughter, as your Master said yesterday, all is well for him. It's good to see him like this: he has regained all his integrity, out of a physical body that was unable to pursue his mission any further. Here, he is already shining, having overcome all the sufferings he had to undergo without our being able to spare him. Such are the divine laws; they may seem unfair in the eyes of human beings, who do not know the reasons for their manifestations in this world, since the dawn of time, without anyone being able to circumvent them.

For the Mission all is well, it is continuing on its way, and the new representative and Master of this Mission will be up to the task. He has been prepared for this for a long time, he has not been chosen in vain.

May all our fervent abhyasis advance in fervour, in gratitude towards the Masters, who have been invested for a long time in this path – unique among its kind – for the good of today's human beings, many of them disoriented by numerous disturbances of all kinds.

Following a path like this is a precious asset; not only does it strengthen beings on the human plane, but it also opens unique prospects for their further evolution. Everything is done for the good of all, without great fanfare or display, but in a lasting manner, in this world and beyond. We do not give grand speeches on this point, nor do we paint an idyllic picture, but the reality is there. The best is being accomplished for the journey of one and all, and this is cause for rejoicing.

May all be reassured and happy for the deliverance of their Master. All is well, believe it, he is now continuing his work in full strength and awareness of the greatness of this Mission and its growing impact in the world.

May all be blessed and strengthened, and more committed than ever to this journey of an uncommon spirituality. So it is.
