Whispers from The Brighter World

Working out of love for us – is it not the perfect challenge for an ardent soul, and what could be more beautiful and more rewarding in a life! An incarnation has many facets and opportunities for one to rise while leading a normal life, one might say. Aspiration for the Divine is innate; it is part of the path when that path is predestined to serve this higher power. Everything then takes its place naturally and leads where needed, as necessary. A human being plans his or her life and God intervenes in His own way, not necessarily following the plans laid down.

Doesn't everything have its raison d'être. To surrender to this power is wisdom itself, and time often shows just how wise it was to do so. When divine love guides it, a life cannot but respond to the laws of destiny. Violence, as it is presently manifesting on this Earth, is saddening; what can we do except follow our path and work towards peace among human beings. One day, the divine goal will be attained, but how many struggles and torments will be necessary to achieve it.

May divine love one day reign in hearts and overwhelm them with happiness; that one is just and enduring. It continues beyond this world and constitutes the true wealth of the human being. May all focus on what is essential and do their best for it.

The best possible for all.
