Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, February 28, 2015 — 10:00 a.m.

Life and death are merely states; they are steps in this long journey of life with all its manifestations. Experiences are lived from one incarnation to another, either affirming divine plans or not. Following a spiritual path that is refined in its effects allows one to better understand all these subtleties that are beyond the understanding of the common run of people. Creation in its various states is incomprehensible to humans. They do their best to adapt to its requirements, but even these go far beyond human approach. The most learned persons are actually quite small before that grandeur which is completely beyond them. This is not an acknowledgement of failure, but only a fact in the face of which humanity must adapt in an effort to understand.

"Even the smallest of creatures, within the framework of its own life, can think itself to be omnipotent, but such is not the case. Each has its own place and preserves life in its many manifestations. As for human beings, they receive spiritual guidance when called upon to grow in that direction. Sometimes, after certain experiences, they manage to find their way; there lies the purpose of an incarnation. Several incarnations are often needed to give them an inkling of which path they should follow for the development of their soul. We can see such beautiful souls in Sahaj Marg, thirsting for the Divine and eager to move towards the goal. This fact makes us happy and more motivated than ever to help our brothers and sisters in this sublime quest for the Divine.

"Blessings to all."
