Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, March 18, 2015 – 10:00 a.m.

The important thing is to love, to open one's heart to the splendour of the Spirit, the one which embellishes everything and operates far beyond the material realm, where the best is accomplished. This world, troubled in more ways than one, seeks its way beyond all human turpitude. Many human beings yearn to follow a path, a spiritual way that is suitable for them. Often, after a few tries, they manage to find what suits them. In each incarnation, one has experiences that help one understand where best to go for an additional and sometimes decisive experience in terms of the goal to be attained. Finding a truly suitable path is a grace, a blessing that deserves the seeker's full attention to ensure that nothing is overlooked that might be regretted.

An incarnation is short compared with eternity. How many experiences are undergone for the path to take shape – the true one that fulfils the soul in its deep yearning for the Divine. Here is the real goal to be achieved; all else is ephemeral and without real meaning. One day the true goal of a life emerges and becomes quite obvious. It then suffices to hold on to it and to appreciate it as such. So many people wander in this world, without having a precise goal, not even knowing there may be an elsewhere where the most important thing exists. Darkness persists on this Earth; we act in order to bring humans to this collective awareness, leading them to understand what needs to be done for this world to truly change.

Blessings to all.
