You are right, my child, let's get back to love. It licks the wounds; receiving it or giving it produces the same effects. It is the ultimate recourse in the most trying situations. Poor is he who neither receives it nor gives it; you should keep this treasure in you if you have it. Make it bear fruit by distributing it generously; it can only pay off. Even if the return is lower than what you gave, that can be enough to gratify you. As far as we are concerned, we do not return it sparingly, you know it; the process is expanded. You give us love, we return it to you a hundredfold. Yours is sincere, ours, needless to say, is of a rare essence, i.e. not of a human nature."

The Medium: "Babuji, I needed to get back to this kind of heart to heart and to hear you speak of love."

"Yes, I understand, after these recent messages which do not let us predict anything good for the future of humanity, it is good to get back to this wonderful topic: love—but, for the occasion, it is about a special love. We do nothing but evoke it; it is impalpable, elusive and cannot be explained. It's meant to be experienced, perceived, given and received: it is divine.

"There lies all the subtlety of this emanation, which comes from the heart, from the depths of the soul. It is a kind of unique elixir, which cannot be described, but can only be experienced while becoming imbued with it.

"Make sure that it develops in you, with our blessings."
