Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, August 8, 2015 – 10:00 a.m.

There is still much to do in the Mission to set up all that needs to be. Over time, the Mission's action will remain exemplary – at all levels. We wish it to become much broader still and capable of touching the greatest possible number of hearts. Humanity must evolve and grow stronger in the face of the current heaviness, before starting off again in the future on new foundations capable of fostering human evolution. Progress, as it is referred to today, does not truly help human beings in what is essential for them. Material and spiritual progress are not incompatible, provided each is given its rightful place. The caveman was not necessarily more focused on this aspect of himself than is today's human being. Only a comprehensive evolution, one that is wanted by the higher powers, will be able to lead this world to the best that can be. Time is doing its work; so many changes have already taken place since its creation. A day will come when it will shift to a higher gear, and what results from this will be prodigious.

Earth is not the only inhabited planet; life manifests in many ways not yet identifiable by human beings, who are after all so small in the face of the creative power of the Divine. It is astounding, you can be sure; a day will come when it will reveal itself to its full extent, leaving humanity truly astonished. That time has not yet come, but it will – so it is. The divine purposes keep their secrets well, and it is best that way. Human beings have enough to do managing their daily lives and planning their future as they can. The divine energy that dwells in each one of their cells can generate the best there is for the future of one and all. It's up to each one to work in this direction; a call is always heard, and we act accordingly. That is the way it is.
