Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, November 2, 2015 — 10:00 a.m.

Everyone's life tells a story; is the story acceptable to the person concerned? Some are content with what they have, others are not. It's all a question of acceptance, which is not always an easy matter. Following a spiritual path helps one clarify the situation and understand the why of things, particularly of trials that are heavy for certain people. Life is not a bed of roses, and nothing is permanently acquired, ever. To surrender to the Divine denotes a potential that gives one a glimpse of the beauty of the soul that motivates the being. From one lifetime to the next a treasure is accumulated, which is priceless when it allows one to reach a level of consciousness that is decisive for human evolution. Beautiful souls glory in serving, in loving the divine power that can achieve anything — even that which is unimaginable for human beings, who are confined by the limits of their understanding. The smartest being, the most mystical, cannot understand everything about divine laws, which are so rigorous and out of everyone's reach. One day, the divine goal will be achieved, so the saying goes. Isn't this prospect sufficiently motivating? It concerns everyone.

"May the effects of grace touch people's hearts in their innermost and most subtle depths to enable a rewarding advancement to the highest point. To all our brothers and sisters, peace and harmony in the heart — the seat of all achievements."
