Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, November 7, 2015 — 10:00 a.m.

Let yourself be carried away on the wings of love, a love that glorifies a life by giving it all its meaning. Blessed are hearts that are eager to love and determined to make progress. What can remain of an incarnation that could be more important, except for the special energy that lifts up the soul to its highest destiny. There are so many aspects to be considered in this area. Humans are so often carried away by the wave of illusion, the attraction of multiple opportunities that are offered to them but that do not lead to what is essential. A pure heart always ends up finding its way, sometimes after many struggles and mistakes; who does not make mistakes! This world is not one of perfection — far from it. Edens exist, but they have yet to be reached.

"There is much to do; each incarnation offers sufficient proof of this. Spiritual Masters are not spared. They too are sometimes taken advantage of by malicious spirits who know how to deceive those near them. All this is the game of life. Everything is counted in minutest detail and recorded in the ledger of the gods, a ledger that cannot be circumvented — nothing can be concealed from it, which is comforting to know. So many behaviours are detestable; in the face of them, one should move on and forget these sorts of torments. Our brothers and sisters will understand these comments. Who, in this world, is spared! May all realise the transience of a life and do their best to save valuable time.

"The best to all."
