Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, November 15, 2015 — 10:00 a.m.

Peace on Earth among humans and for the good of all — that is what would be decisive for the balance of humanity. Hatreds are not constructive; they seriously restrain the expansion of consciousness and keep humankind in a heartbreaking stagnation at all levels. Transcending those situations definitively would be a very important step for the good of all living beings. Advancing in that direction, freed from the unnecessary, would clarify once and for all the status of the human race; this world is far from perfect. May general awareness allow people of good will to look to higher and nobler aspects, and thereby free humankind. How many centuries will it take to clear up the situation and ennoble human beings on their Earthly journey — a journey which could provide them with so many constructive benefits at all levels.

"The only aspiration of the soul is to rise above the miasma of this materiality that leaves the human being overly bogged down in a state of disconcerting negativity. We are constantly working in this direction — one that truly matters to us and seeks to change, even on a limited scale, this situation that is heartbreaking in many respects. Let us not despair. One day the divine goal will be achieved and a wave of love will overwhelm this world so as to not see it destroyed for reasons that would then prevail. Special blessings to all."
