Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, April 4, 2016 - 10:00 a.m.

The days are passing. The cycle of life is being fulfilled, and each of the beings living on this Earth follows a path of their own. Karma is strict. From one incarnation to the next, an asset is carried over, one that is decisive for the subsequent steps of a process that is necessary for the evolution of every human being. How many incarnations are needed for this? They are countless. The divine laws regulate, according to necessity, what is suitable for each one. In this area there is extreme rigour and no leeway, you can be sure. Everything is counted and studied in the greatest detail; hence the need for acceptance and surrender to the higher power so as not to hinder the progress of an evolutionary cycle that is critical for each incarnate being.

Through their practice, our abhyasis are saving very precious time. So many burdens and deviations are thus avoided, fostering an expansion of consciousness that is necessary for each one's evolution. Sahaj Marg, in its apparent and great simplicity, operates on sensitive points that generally evade any other intervention. Time is more than precious here in this long journey of the soul towards the goal. Each step is important — decisive, shall we say. Our way accompanies the seeker, who is inspired and moderated in certain circumstances for good reason. No one is perfect; human beings must struggle throughout their lives in order to adapt to what their karma holds. Nothing happens in vain. Every experience is an essential element in a destiny that has long been designed; peace, serenity and action are crucial in this.

To all, strength and courage for the best that can be, according to our wishes.
