Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, April 13, 2016 — 10:00 a.m.

Surrender, whose virtues are extolled in our Mission, is an important starting point for the progress and personal journey of an abhyasi. It takes time to act, to harmonise the subtle bodies and ensure that the best is brought about for each of our abhyasis. We keep a careful eye on their journey; time produces conclusive results in this quest for the Divine. The union of hearts results in harmony and a vital life force — that which operates, transforms and creates an unparalleled egregore. It cannot be described, but only experienced; to benefit from it is a divine gift, a grace. These words, though infrequently used in these messages, are nonetheless suited to the situation.

Time does its work; yesterday's Mission has created the one of today, and tomorrow's Mission will come forth even more in this troubled world — a world in search of a degree of peace and love within a context that is in many ways bewildering. Due to a disturbing vibratory environment, a severe pollution at all levels, this world does not naturally promote the development of a human being's refined nature — that nature which aspires for the Divine from its innermost depths. The heart, the seat of the soul, focuses on what it has personally gained, that which only wants to open out and grow spiritually. Some people withdraw from the world, while others come to terms with their everyday lives and include a course of action that can generate the best results. A sincere and motivated abhyasi succeeds, sometimes even beyond his or her expectations. Thus, all is well.

Blessings to all.
