Sunday, September 5, 1999 - 10:00 a.m.

The Medium: "Babuji, when I am in contact with you and you tell me nice things, it is like paradise. When I come round, in this poor Earthly self of mine, all the magic fades away, I mean, almost. All the beautiful things you say relate to the deeper part of my being; the criticisms instead are addressed to me actually. Thus the balance is satisfactory."

My dear child, you know how to put things in perspective. It is true that until the end, while incarnate, we must fight with this human nature, which leads its struggle as best it can. The divine self has its own life, even if both seem to interfere with each other in certain circumstances... The beautiful and pure part of a being is inviolable and indestructible, no matter what happens."

Babuji