Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, July 1, 2016 – 10:00 a.m.

This very long series of messages is not given in vain; these writings must all be known, at least to those who are willing to read them. But the important thing lies in this – a complete distribution of them, and we would like that to be. May we be heard. We are coming to the end of this long cycle of transmission. It is unique, we have said it often enough. It has brought many benefits to our brothers and sisters who are mindful of what it represents for Sahaj Marg. The future will know how to weigh these things, making it possible to correctly take the measure of this heavenly manna from which our Mission benefits. It can sometimes take a long while to judge the true value of things. It has always been so, and now more than ever. Human beings allow themselves to be carried away by the turbulence of life – the one said to be modern but that is so disconnected from the true values that endure and determine the future of each one. Collective Karma defines itself in its own way; it prefigures what tomorrow's world will be like, faced with new situations and the problems that will go with them. Life is like that on this Earth where nothing in the past has ever been easy. How many people here below are struggling and suffering, with no hope of a better life. Privileged peoples must think about this and derive the necessary insights. We would like to change everything and abolish poverty and suffering once and for all, but this cannot be. We act effectively and in our own way, for the good of all. Unceasing blessings.
