Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, September 12, 2016 — 10:00 a.m.

Certain past events influence history for a long time; it is appalling to see what hatred can generate in this world. When will human beings come to reason? Sustained hatred is never good. It is dismaying to all those who are working here and elsewhere for the good, and for peace on Earth. How many more centuries will it take for humanity to reach a sufficient level of consciousness — one that would allow it to establish rules that are conducive to harmony between peoples, leading at last to the building of a peaceful world, and facilitating unprecedented expansion of consciousness. That time will come; we are working towards it. Nothing is ever easy on this planet where there is constant rebelliousness. May all our brothers and sisters work towards the good as we understand it. A perfect world is in the offing; it is up to each and every one to visualise it and to personally work in that direction.

The best to all, under our blessings.
