Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, November 28, 2016 — 10:00 a.m.

Nothing lasts, so it is said. Only essential values endure and maintain a desirable level with regard to spiritual evolution. This evolution is a priority for us, as it should be for every human being. An incarnation is an opportunity offered to each person to develop his or her potential, the most precious one there is — namely, the capacity to open up to divine splendour. Isn't it the only true asset a human being has, one that is found again from life to life? It manifests differently from one lifetime to the next but leads each person to vistas on the Infinite. Whatever the place may be, and whatever a person's race, a human being possesses this unique capital that asks only to grow, and yet it is necessary for a person to be aware of it and to look for a suitable path. Such a path arises on its own when necessary.

The soul aspires to the Divine — this no longer needs to be proven. All that remains is for one to become fully aware of it. Then the path becomes illuminated, even if life on the material plane is not simple; this consolation is given to human beings to enable them to unite with the Divine. Then the most beautiful of paths remains to be followed. When love genuinely carries a person, that path becomes the true challenge of one's life. Only this achievement is the surest and the most decisive for the succession of events to come.

Blessings to all.
