Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, April 17, 2017 – 10:00 a.m.

Time passes, nothing really changes; it is advisable to adapt to the current reality. The aspiration for the Divine is the only one that does not change; the human being has this potential that affirms itself according to the circumstances and demands of karma. These are disconcerting at times; how could their complexities be understood. The only option is surrender, as we advocate here with so much insistence. Nothing great can be built without this ability to love, to allow whatever must be to prevail in the course of an incarnation. Each of these is a link in the chain constituting the divine will, ultimately to adjust itself and produce the best possible, even if this reality does not appear to human eyes.

Following a spiritual path is a matter of wisdom; time brings this awareness, lighting the way where the best can be accomplished. Surrendering to the Divine, to the incarnate Master, is the best option. When the time of assessment comes, there is nothing left to prove, it only remains to take full advantage of this privilege that transforms one's life.

This is how it is.
