Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, October 20, 2012 — 10:00 a.m.

The door is narrow, but the goal to be attained is worthwhile; it is the only goal of value, and for this reason nothing should be spared in reaching it. How many struggles, trials and multiple experiences are the lot of all human beings! An evolutionary cycle is pursued from one incarnation to another; everything is counted, and everything has its raison d'être. Human beings sometimes fail to accept what life has in store for them; many of its occurrences are not easy to understand. Why endure this or that, they say. It takes wisdom to accept ordeals as a necessity to which each one must submit for many reasons that exceed human understanding. Divine laws keep their mystery; here as elsewhere, humans have no choice. Shortening an incarnation solves nothing; that is the last thing one should do. Following an active spiritual way is a recourse that can save time — a lot of time when the commitment is total. Faith in this objective is paramount and yields the finest fruits.

To see a soul blossoming, opening up to higher reality by going well beyond materiality, is the ultimate goal. The conquest of the sovereign Spirit is the richest conquest; it presents the seeker with the most beautiful reward. This reward is an indescribable blessing, difficult to assess in human terms as it has no Earthly criterion as a basis of comparison. Isn't this sublime conquest a major asset? Relieving oneself of what is useless for attaining the goal is a major reason. It is up to each one to consider, under our blessings.
