Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, October 25, 2012 – 10:00 a.m.

Love carries you; it is your true joy, your strength, that which supports you throughout the day when your physical body gives you a great deal of torment. Love begets love; unfortunate are those who do not know it and who search in vain for a meaning in this Earthly existence. Following a spiritual path is a magnificent epic; it knows no end because the benefits it produces extend to other planes of consciousness where life continues in a different manner. Hoping for eternal rest is not the proper view of things. Not only does life go on, but it also transforms itself and evolves over time.

Blessed are those who become aware of this aspect, who consider this possibility and who are preparing themselves as best as possible by shedding anything that weighs them down and hinders them on this evolutionary path. The objective is to achieve the goal; our method is effective. It is given in these times of preparation, shall we say, to bring them to a level of consciousness capable of saving them valuable time. The greatest beings also have to work, to progress ever further in subtlety to levels which cannot be humanly conceived. May our aspirants rest assured: their approach makes them progress much more than they imagine. It is not easy to advance in the understanding of phenomena; here, more than elsewhere, surrender is necessary. A high-level Master, who has been prepared for this extraordinary mandate, must also face a reality that is sometimes painful. In taking birth in the service of good, he undergoes the effects. Such are the laws that govern this world of the Spirit, whose power is unimaginable here below.
