Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, March 11, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

Why dwell on the appreciation of others, isn't ours enough for you? You are a good medium and that is not as easy as those around you think. You invest yourself in this work and it's natural that you express yourself when you wish to do so.

This new series will puzzle you more than once. You will have to get used to this new genre whose contents are unverifiable and adapt yourself at all costs.

We give you a little time. Your helpers will support you in this new stage, full of surprises.

You finally resigned yourself to not doubting anymore, and yet we start shaking you up again. We have to move forward in our work and you need to trust in us. That is all we can tell you on this subject. Have no fear, you receive us very well; the discourse changes, but you are not the cause of that.

We couldn't eternally go along in the same register.

Keep these writings for yourself if you so wish – it is up to you – but it is good to prepare open minds for this possibility of a complete upheaval in future times. Before disappearing, some ancient civilizations have gone through similar events. They take place over very long periods of time and do not concern you all.
