Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, March 16, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

Raise your thought above the world's baseness to the higher plane where you will come one day when your Earthly life is over. There, you will be able to give your full measure and help according to your wishes. Everything will be different for you, that active life will suit you better. In that dimension your actions will be constructive, in the way you intend. That world, where you will have to find your feet, will bewilder you at first. You will have to adapt. A new kind of mission will start for you in relation to your true personality – the one that, on Earth, is not revealed. It will be a startling world for an entity coming from your planet, where your gifts will be applied in other fields, after a time of rest and assessment.

Rest and eternal bliss belong to religious imagery. Not everything is as rosy or as dark as this imagery would like to suggest. Life on other planes does not resemble remarks conveyed to reassure or frighten people.

New worlds with different rules await them, and they will have to deal with these. It is useless to try to imagine them, so the discovery will be total. In conclusion, all of you can rest assured: your life does not end upon leaving the Earth – in a way, it begins.

Put the loss of dear beings into perspective. They have completed their journey on Earth and are pursuing it elsewhere, for their own evolution.
