Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, March 17, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

Our repetitions shouldn't surprise you; they are intentional and necessary for the understanding of human beings. By reverting repeatedly to certain subjects, one ends up assimilating the truths that emerge from our remarks. These repeated returns enable one to absorb those truths, even if at first they seem trivial. To put it in simple terms, they end up touching the reader in the depths of his or her being.

Why would sacred writings be read and reread indefinitely if that repetition were not important? They are the food needed by minds for their inner construction.

Through our repetitions, we draw the attention of readers who, in certain cases, end up becoming aware of a reality that had not even crossed their minds.
