Beloved Master
Revered Babuji Maharaj

Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, March 22, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

Reassure this daughter who is so dear to your heart. We watch over him who was her fellow traveller on this Earth. He awakens to another life and puts all his ardour into it. She can console herself by considering that, one day, they will meet again on a road where the ordeals they experienced together will be forgotten. From now on they will be able, each on their own, to advance on a path that will one day bring them together again, both of them going towards the light.

Did you think I would not appear to you on this special day? We share in your joy. She too will take to heart the pursuit of this spiritual approach that has become necessary to her life. From now on, her values will no longer be the same.

The loss of a dear one often modifies future prospects.

In those circumstances, each one remotivates themselves by readjusting their life with other objectives. I will come towards the two of you this afternoon. In the meantime, try to remain united through the heart with us and with those you love and who follow, here, a path parallel to yours.

Babuji