Beloved Master
Revered Babuji Maharaj

Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, March 27, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

A spiritual Master is admired, envied, feared and loved. He is also a lonely man. He has to face all the trials inherent in an incarnation on this Earth. His fate is enviable only insofar as he has this good fortune: to be able to serve, at a very high level, the supreme authorities who place their trust in him. It is a very particular grace that must be honoured as best one can, unceasingly, always with one and the same objective: giving satisfaction to the hierarchy. That is what a Master's life is all about.

He is not appreciated by everyone, he has his detractors and enemies who cannot bear his prerogatives. There is always another side of the coin in all situations of this kind.

The essential thing is to have the strength given by faith to go further and further, to complete the task that has been set.

As a human being, lassitude weighs heavily on his shoulders. The spiritual being remains vigilant and propels him tirelessly ahead, so that he can accomplish the mission entrusted to him.

The power of love carries and subjugates him in moments when everything is difficult. It is the miracle remedy that overcomes the worst torments.

To be loved and supported by his Revered Master is the best support and the only true happiness for him, here below.

Babuji