Thursday, September 30, 1999 - 10:00 AM

My son worries too much about his succession, which will happen in due time. Time on earth seems long to him, he also would like to come and join us. The greatness of his mission is embodied here on earth. He must complete it and should not get lost in groundless considerations for the moment. Who could better than him manage as he does it, this immense enterprise? He is a being of great spiritual dimension as well as a shrewd businessman! He is perfect in his role.

"I also had only one idea in my mind: To rejoin my very Revered Master. He let me languish for a long time, but there was nothing else for it. Nobody will take the selected place we reserve for him here, and then he should wait.

"The succession won't be easy. His successor should have broad shoulders. He should have a great understanding of human behaviours, and especially how to choose collaborators whom he can trust completely and give responsibilities. In essence, the human being changes so disconcertingly often, that a long experience of his behaviour is necessary in order to make this judicious choice. Errors are inevitable, and sometimes necessary, to restart on a stronger basis. Everything needs learning and meriting."

Babuji